Master Negotiation Course Handbook

"Win better deals, raise your rates, and keep the relationship."

Business Strategy & Deal-Making Track | 6 Weeks | All Levels 28-Page Illustrated Edition

Prepared by CHRISCO Youth Aflame | chriscoyouthaflame2025@gmail.com

Course Foreword

Every extra shilling you earn in your life will pass through a negotiation, a salary, a price, a deadline, a partnership. Yet almost nobody is taught how to do it. That is a gift to you, because a little skill here puts you ahead of nearly everyone you will ever sit across from.

Forget the image of the aggressive shark. The best negotiators are calm, curious and prepared. They listen more than they talk. They make the other side feel safe, then guide the deal toward a place that works for both. This book teaches that quieter, stronger way.

THE PRACTITIONER PROMISE

You will learn to prepare like a professional, ask for more without fear, handle 'no', and close agreements both sides are glad to sign, skills that pay for the rest of your life.

Do the exercises with real stakes, your actual rates, a real purchase, a real ask at work. Practice on things that matter is the only kind that sticks.

Published by CHRISCO Digital Academy under CHRISCO Youth Aflame (CHRISCO Fellowship of Churches), this 28-page course handbook explains every module clearly with visual diagrams, real East African case studies, and step-by-step labs. Foundations & Core Mindset

Module 01: The mindset that wins before you speak | Module 02: Preparation is 80% of the win

MODULE 01 · PART 1

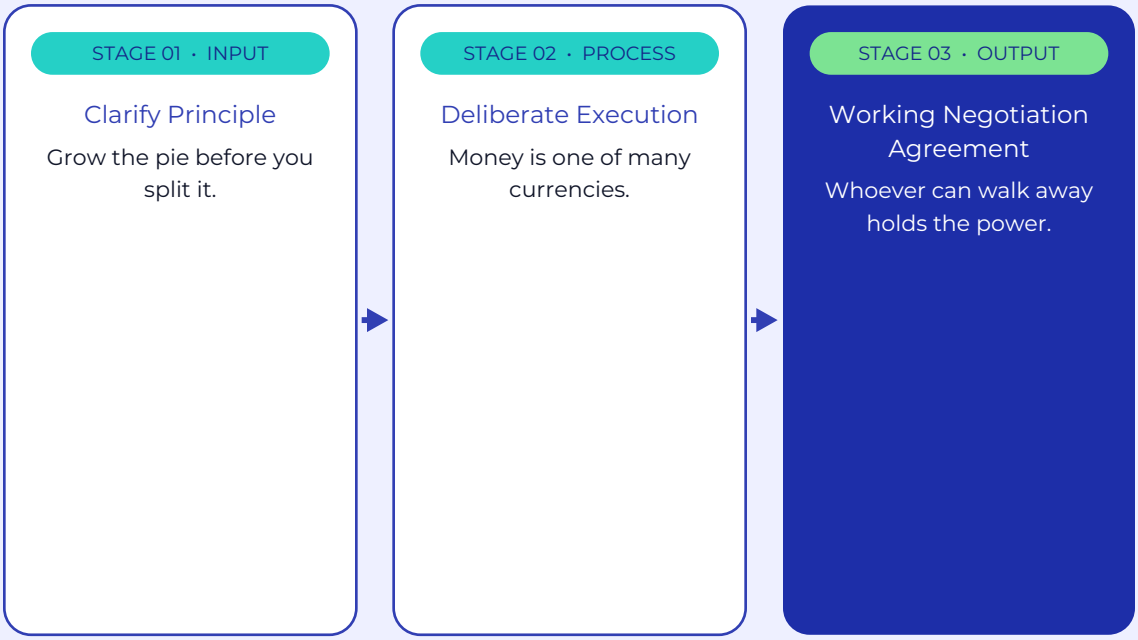

1.1 The mindset that wins before you speak

Weak negotiators believe there is a fixed pie and every gain for the other side is a loss for them. Strong negotiators look for the bigger pie, trades where each side gives what is cheap for them and gets what is valuable to them. A client may not have more cash but can offer a testimonial, a referral, or a longer contract. Money is only one currency.

The second shift is emotional: you must be willing to walk away. The moment you need this deal more than the other side, you have handed them the power. Decide your walk-away point before you start, and the fear that usually controls you loses its grip.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about the mindset that wins before you speak at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that grow the pie before you split it., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 01: THE MINDSET THAT WINS BEFORE YOU SPEAK

MODULE 01 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A designer could not get a client past a low budget. Instead of dropping his price, he traded: full fee, but paid over three months, plus a written referral to two other businesses. Same money for the client's cash flow, two new clients for him. Bigger pie.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 01

Your Practical Task: For your next deal, list three things you value that cost the other side little (a referral, a review, flexible timing, repeat work). Plan to ask for those if they cannot move on price.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 01 Key Takeaways

01

Grow the pie before you split it.

02

Money is one of many currencies.

03

Whoever can walk away holds the power.

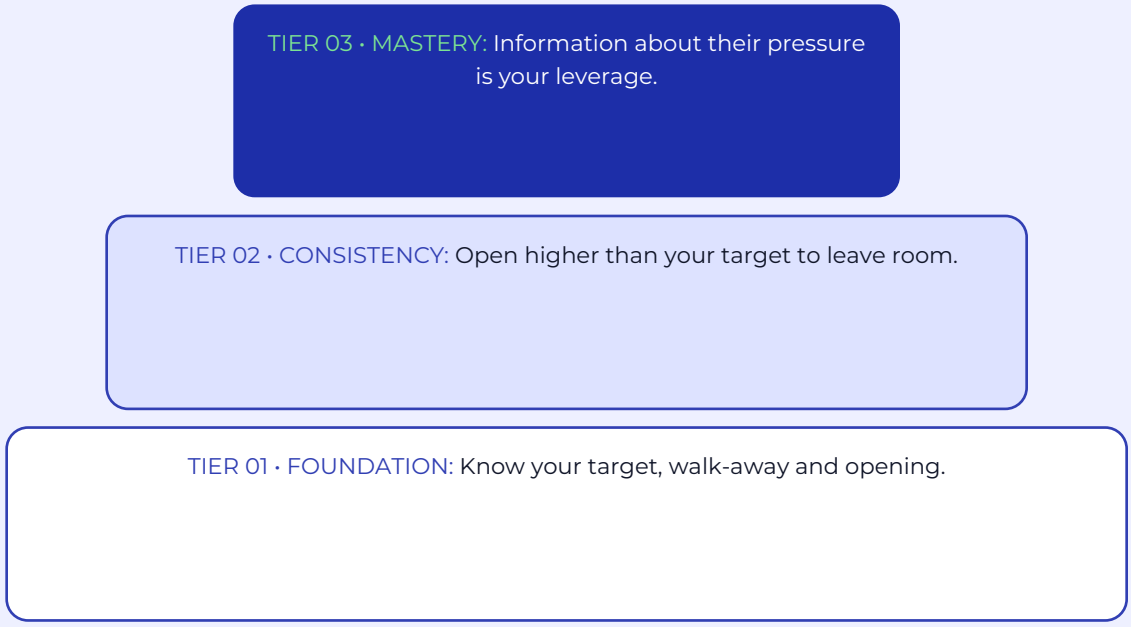

1.2 Preparation is 80% of the win

Deals are usually decided before the conversation starts, by whoever prepared better. Three numbers to know before you speak: your target (what you truly want), your walk-away (the worst you will accept), and your opening (higher than target, so you have room to move). Write them down. Never enter a real negotiation without these three.

Then research the other side. What do they need, what pressures them, what is this worth to them? Knowing that a client just landed a big contract, or that a landlord has had an empty unit for months, is not luck, it is homework. Information is leverage, and leverage is quietly built beforehand.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about preparation is 80% of the win at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that know your target, walk-away and opening., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 02: PREPARATION IS 80% OF THE WIN

MODULE 02 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Preparation is 80% of the win

Core Rule:
Know your target, walk-away and opening.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 02 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
Renting a workspace, one founder learned the unit had sat empty for four months. That single fact, the landlord's pain, let her negotiate two free months. She did not out-argue him; she out-prepared him.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 02

Your Practical Task: Before your next negotiation, write your target, walk-away and opening numbers, plus three things you know about the other side's situation. Do not skip the writing.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 02 Key Takeaways

01

Know your target, walk-away and opening.

02

Open higher than your target to leave room.

03

Information about their pressure is your leverage.

02
Core Frameworks & Strategy

Module 03: Anchoring and framing | Module 04: Tactical empathy, listen your way to yes

MODULE 03 · PART 1

2.1 Anchoring and framing

The first real number spoken pulls the whole conversation toward it, this is anchoring. If you have done your homework, going first with a confident, justified number sets the frame. If you are unsure of the range, let them anchor, then adjust hard. Either way, an anchor is only powerful when it comes with a reason.

Framing decides how a number feels. 'It is 500,000' lands differently than 'It is 500,000, which is about the cost of one lost customer a month, and this stops that.' Same price, different meaning. Always attach your number to the value it protects or creates, not to your costs.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about anchoring and framing at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that the first justified number anchors the deal., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 03: ANCHORING AND FRAMING

COMMON BEGINNER MISTAKE

Rushing without structure, copying surface trends blindly, and skipping hands-on testing before moving to the next topic.

Outcome: Fragile negotiation agreement that stalls under real conditions.

PRACTITIONER STANDARD

The first justified number anchors the deal. Paired with a number without a reason is weak.

Outcome: Reliable negotiation agreement ready for real clients & growth.

MODULE 03 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Anchoring and framing

Core Rule:
The first justified number anchors the deal.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 03 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A freelancer stopped saying 'I charge 300k'. He started saying 'Websites like this bring in far more than they cost; this one is 300k.' His close rate rose, not because of the number, but because of the frame around it.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 03

Your Practical Task: Write your price or ask, then write one sentence of value to say immediately after it. Never state a number naked again.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 03 Key Takeaways

01

The first justified number anchors the deal.

02

A number without a reason is weak.

03

Frame price against value, not against your costs.

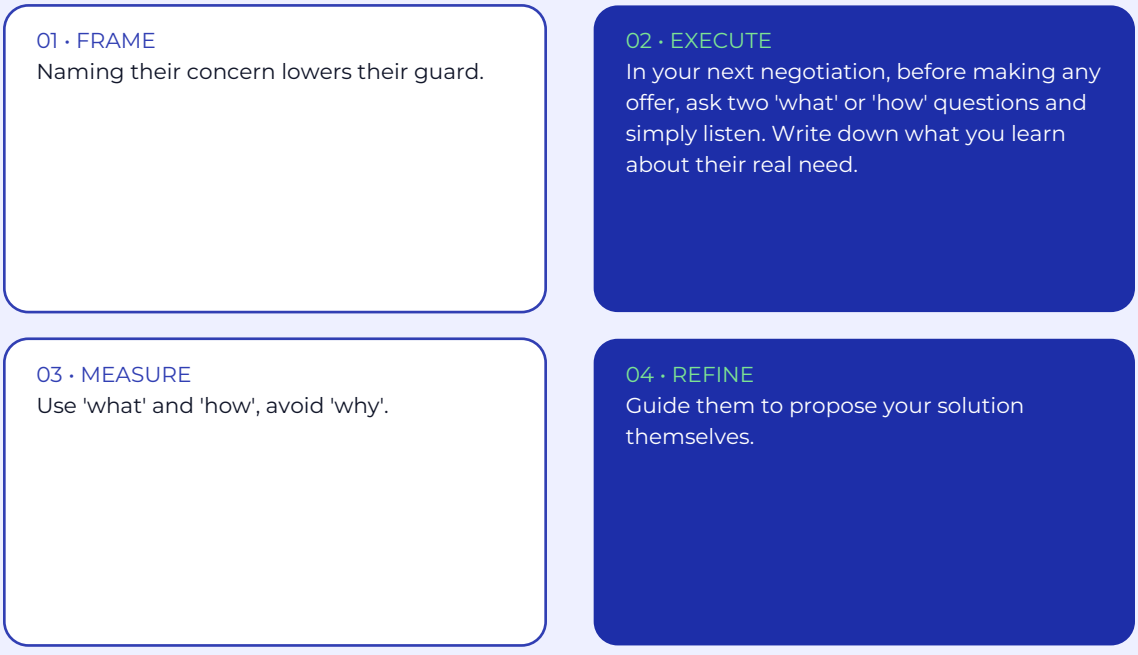

2.2 Tactical empathy - listen your way to yes

Counter-intuitively, the person who listens most usually controls the negotiation. When you accurately name the other side's position, 'It sounds like your worry is going over budget this quarter', they relax, correct you if needed, and reveal what they really care about. You cannot solve a need you have not uncovered.

Ask open questions that start with 'how' and 'what', not 'why' (which sounds like an attack). 'What would need to be true for this to work for you?' invites them to design a deal you can both accept. People defend their own ideas far more than yours, so lead them to say your solution first.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about tactical empathy, listen your way to yes at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that naming their concern lowers their guard., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 04: TACTICAL EMPATHY - LISTEN YOUR WAY TO YES

MODULE 04 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Tactical empathy, listen your way to yes

Core Rule:
Naming their concern lowers their guard.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 04 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A supplier kept refusing a discount. The buyer stopped pushing and asked, 'What makes this hard on your side?' The real issue was payment timing, not price. They agreed on faster payment for a better rate. Listening found the deal arguing had hidden.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 04

Your Practical Task: In your next negotiation, before making any offer, ask two 'what' or 'how' questions and simply listen. Write down what you learn about their real need.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 04 Key Takeaways

01

Naming their concern lowers their guard.

02

Use 'what' and 'how', avoid 'why'.

03

Guide them to propose your solution themselves.

03
Execution & Applied Mastery

Module 05: Handle 'no' and pushback calmly | Module 06: Money talks, salary, rates and deals

MODULE 05 · PART 1

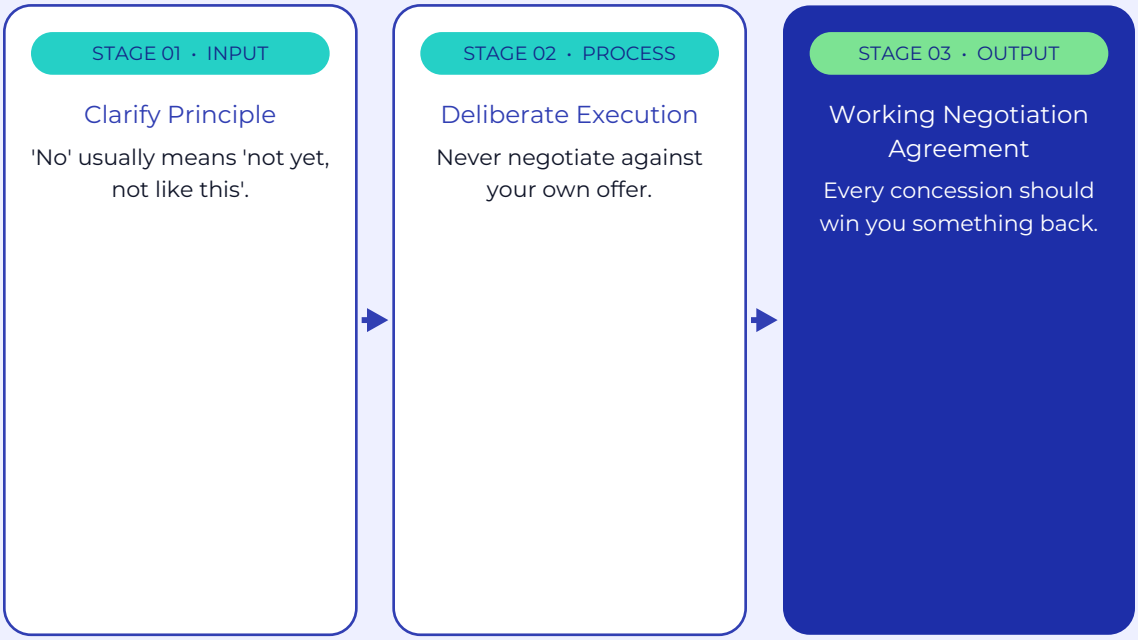

3.1 Handle 'no' and pushback calmly

'No' is rarely the end, it is usually 'not like this, not yet.' When you hear it, do not panic or cave. Stay curious: 'I understand. Help me see what is not working.' Most objections are really questions in disguise, about risk, budget, or trust. Answer the real concern and the 'no' often softens.

Never negotiate against yourself. Beginners hear silence or a frown and immediately drop their price before the other side has even countered. Make your offer, then stop talking. Let the silence do its work. If they push, trade rather than concede: 'I can do that price if we extend to six months.' Every give should get.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about handle 'no' and pushback calmly at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that 'no' usually means 'not yet, not like this'., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 05: HANDLE 'NO' AND PUSHBACK CALMLY

MODULE 05 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Handle 'no' and pushback calmly

Core Rule:
'No' usually means 'not yet, not like this'.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 05 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A client said 'too expensive.' Instead of discounting, the freelancer asked, 'Compared to what?' The client admitted the budget was fine but feared missing the deadline. They added a milestone plan, and the deal closed at full price.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 05

Your Practical Task: Write the three objections you hear most. For each, write a calm question that uncovers the real concern, plus a trade you could offer instead of a discount.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 05 Key Takeaways

01

'No' usually means 'not yet, not like this'.

02

Never negotiate against your own offer.

03

Every concession should win you something back.

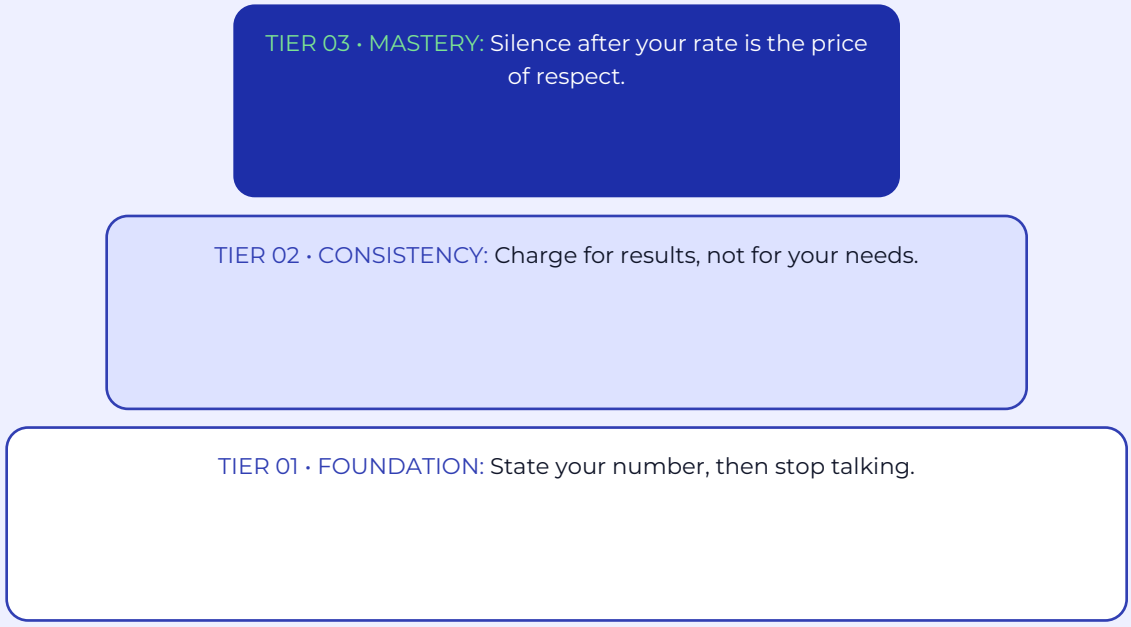

3.2 Money talks - salary, rates and deals

The scariest negotiation for most people is about their own worth. The rule: state your number clearly, then be quiet. Do not apologise, do not laugh nervously, do not immediately offer to lower it. 'For this scope, my rate is X.' Full stop. The discomfort you feel in the silence is normal, sit in it.

When raising rates with existing clients, lead with results, not needs. Nobody pays more because your rent went up; they pay more because you deliver value. 'Over the last months this brought you Y; going forward my rate will be X' ties the increase to what they gained. Give notice, be calm, and be ready to walk if it is truly below your floor.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about money talks, salary, rates and deals at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that state your number, then stop talking., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 06 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Money talks, salary, rates and deals

Core Rule:
State your number, then stop talking.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 06 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A social media manager charging 150k realised her client's sales had doubled from her work. She said, 'The account has grown a lot; from next month my rate is 300k.' The client agreed in a day, because she had priced the result, not her time.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 06

Your Practical Task: Write your rate or salary ask as one clean sentence with no apology. Say it out loud ten times until the silence after it stops scaring you.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 06 Key Takeaways

01

State your number, then stop talking.

02

Charge for results, not for your needs.

03

Silence after your rate is the price of respect.

04
Scaling, Capstone & Excellence

Module 07: Close win-win agreements | Module 08: Your live negotiation simulation

MODULE 07 · PART 1

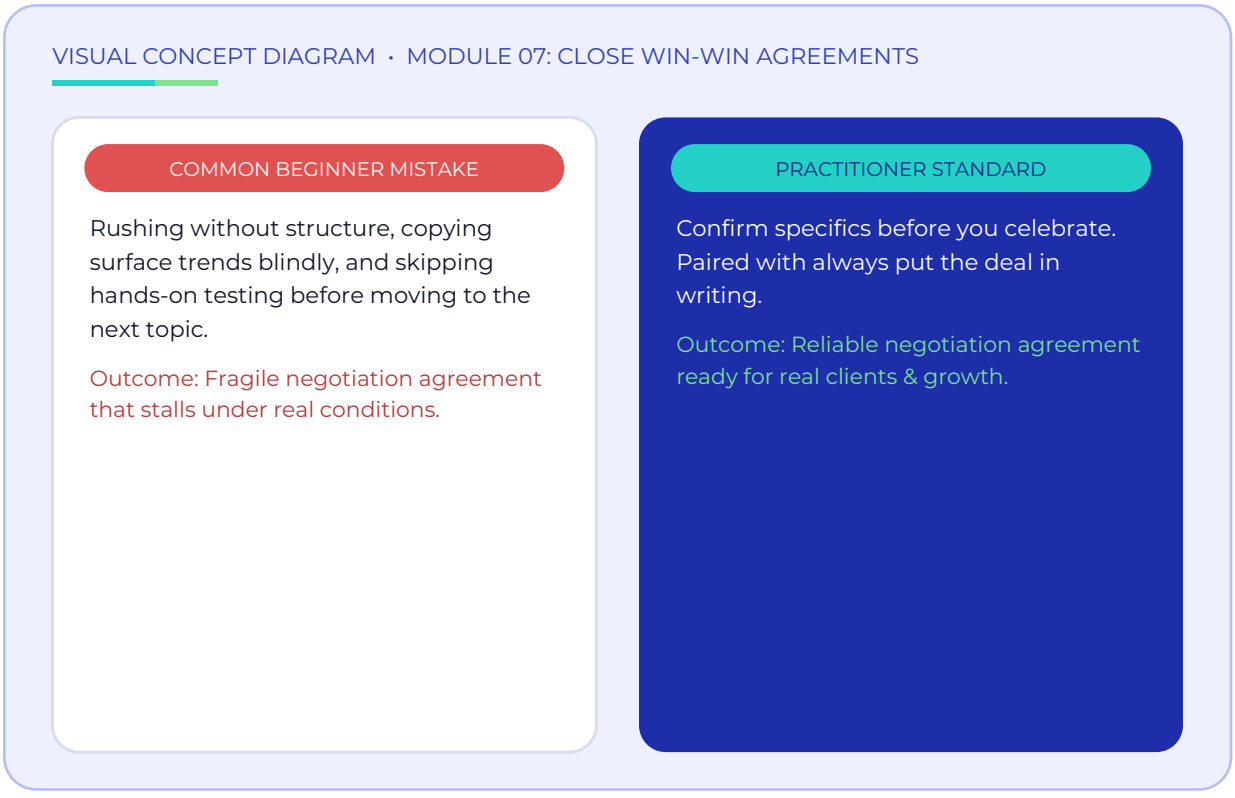

4.1 Close win-win agreements

A deal is not done when you shake hands, it is done when the terms are clear and written. Vague agreements rot into disputes. Before you celebrate, confirm the specifics: what, how much, by when, and what happens if things change. Summarise it back: 'So we agreed on X for Y, delivered by Z, correct?' Then put it in writing, even a simple message.

Aim for a deal the other side is glad they made, not one they feel tricked into. The best negotiators are not the ones who win once; they are the ones people want to deal with again. A slightly smaller win today that builds a five-year relationship beats a crushing win that burns the bridge.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about close win-win agreements at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that confirm specifics before you celebrate., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 07: CLOSE WIN-WIN AGREEMENTS

MODULE 07 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Close win-win agreements

Core Rule:
Confirm specifics before you celebrate.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 07 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
Two founders agreed a partnership verbally over tea and later fell out over who owed what. A one-page written summary, roles, money, timeline, would have saved the friendship and the business. Always write it down.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 07

Your Practical Task: After your next agreement, send a short written summary: what, how much, by when, and next steps. Ask them to confirm. Make this a lifelong habit.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 07 Key Takeaways

01

Confirm specifics before you celebrate.

02

Always put the deal in writing.

03

Reputation compounds, protect the relationship.

4.2 Your live negotiation simulation

Skill comes from reps, not reading. Set up a real practice negotiation, a mock salary talk, a price negotiation with a friend playing a tough buyer, or a genuine purchase you are about to make. Prepare properly using your three numbers and your research. Then run it, and afterwards debrief honestly.

In the debrief, ask three questions: Where did I feel fear and what did I do? Where did I talk when I should have listened? What would I trade differently next time? Every negotiation you review teaches you more than ten you simply survive. Keep a small log of deals and lessons, it becomes your edge.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about your live negotiation simulation at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real negotiation agreement. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that practice with real stakes whenever you can., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 08 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Your live negotiation simulation

Core Rule:
Practice with real stakes whenever you can.

Target Output:
Working negotiation agreement

MODULE 08 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A learner practised a rent negotiation with a classmate first. In the real one, the landlord used the exact objection she had rehearsed. She stayed calm, traded a longer lease for a lower rate, and saved real money, because she had already been there once.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Master Negotiation workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 08

Your Practical Task: Run one real or realistic negotiation this week. Prepare your three numbers, research the other side, and afterwards write your three debrief answers. Repeat monthly.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 08 Key Takeaways

01

Practice with real stakes whenever you can.

02

Debrief every negotiation in writing.

03

Reviewed reps, not luck, build mastery.

5.2 Applied Fellowship Case Reflections

Real transformation happens when learners turn theory into consistent service. Reflect on these cohort case highlights from across East Africa as you prepare your own project:

"A designer could not get a client past a low budget. Instead of dropping his price, he traded: full fee, but paid over three months, plus a written referral to two other businesses. Same money for the client's cash flow, two new clients for him. Bigger pie."
