Sales & Marketing Course Handbook

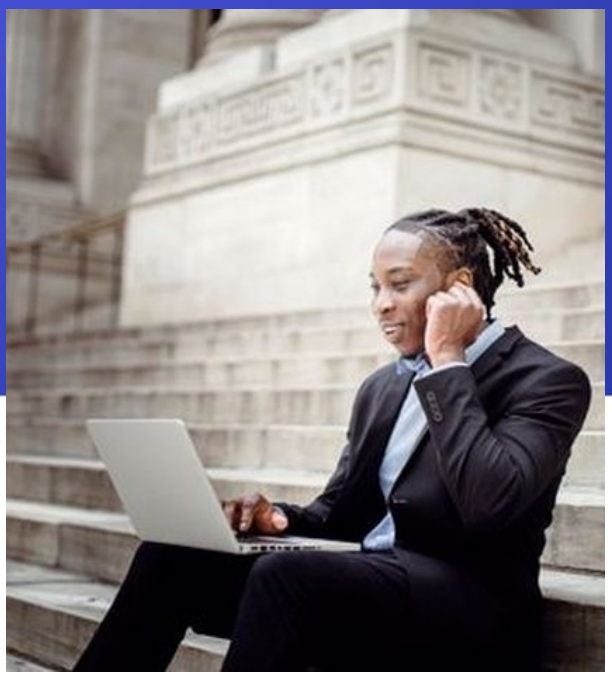

"Attract customers, pitch with confidence, and close the sale."

Revenue Growth & Go-To-Market Track | 8 Weeks | All Levels 28-Page Illustrated Edition

Prepared by CHRISCO Youth Aflame | chriscoyouthaflame2025@gmail.com

Course Foreword

Marketing gets attention; sales turns attention into money. Master both and you will never be broke, because you can always create value and get paid for it. This is arguably the most important money skill there is, and almost nobody is taught it properly.

You do not need to be loud, pushy or dishonest. The best sellers are trusted helpers who understand a problem deeply and offer a genuine solution. This book teaches that respectful, effective way, the kind that builds a business, not just a one-time sale.

THE PRACTITIONER PROMISE

You will learn to understand your customer, build an offer people want, market it across the right channels, and hold a sales conversation that ends in yes, the skills behind every successful business.

Apply each chapter to something real you can sell, a product, a skill, a service. The exercises are designed to end with you actually making offers to actual people.

Published by CHRISCO Digital Academy under CHRISCO Youth Aflame (CHRISCO Fellowship of Churches), this 28-page course handbook explains every module clearly with visual diagrams, real East African case studies, and step-by-step labs. Reach our mentorship desk anytime at chriscoyouthaflame2025@gmail.com.

Foundations & Core Mindset

Module 01: Marketing fundamentals | Module 02: Understand your customer deeply

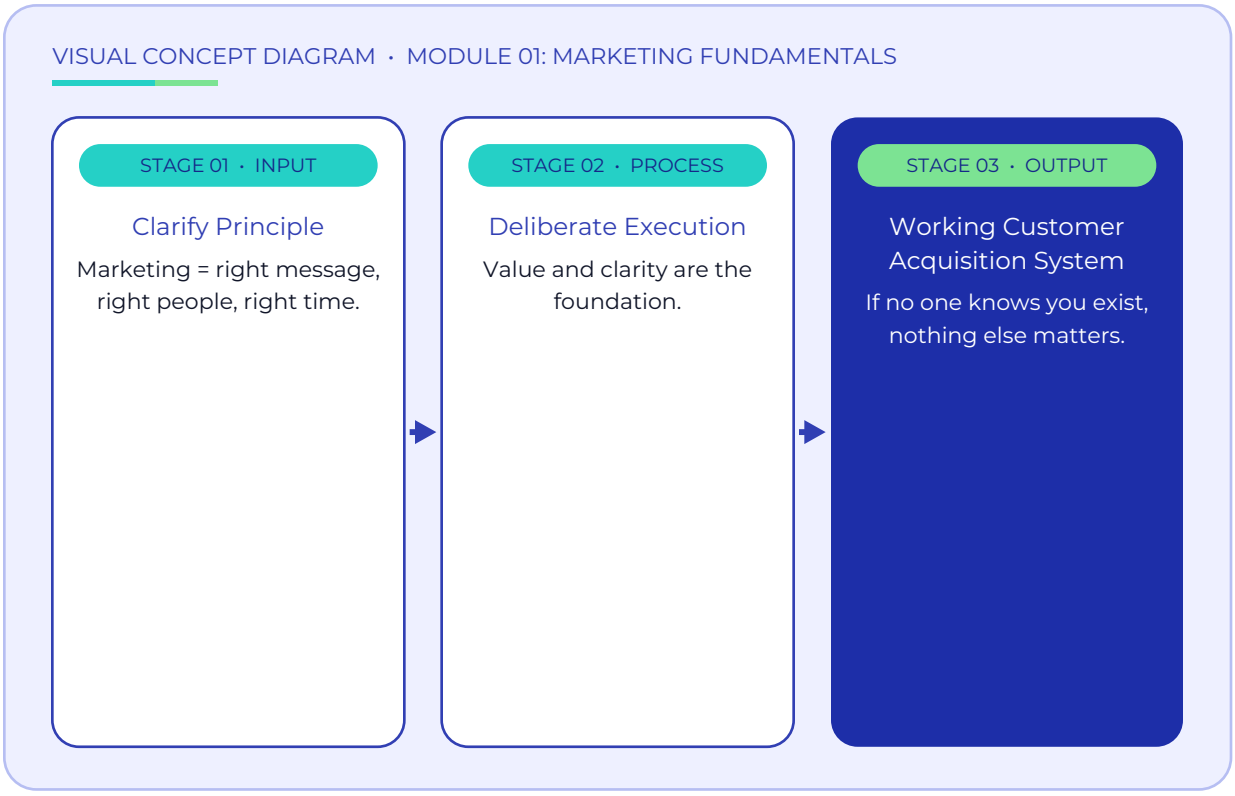

MODULE 01 · PART 1

1.1 Marketing fundamentals

Marketing is simply this: getting the right message, to the right people, at the right time, so they know, like and trust you enough to buy. It is not just adverts. It is everything that shapes how people perceive and find you, your content, your reputation, your word of mouth, your presence. If nobody knows you exist, nothing else matters.

The core of all marketing is value and clarity. Be genuinely useful, and be clear about what you offer and who it is for. Confused people do not buy. Your job is to make it obvious, quickly, what problem you solve and why someone should choose you. Everything else is detail on top of that foundation.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about marketing fundamentals at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that marketing = right message, right people, right time., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 01 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
Two shops sell the same phones. One just waits for customers. The other posts helpful phone tips daily, answers questions freely, and is known as 'the phone expert'. When people are ready to buy, guess who they trust. That is marketing.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT • MODULE 01

Your Practical Task: Write one sentence: what you sell, who it is for, and the problem it solves. If a stranger can't understand it instantly, simplify until they can.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 01 Key Takeaways

01

Marketing = right message, right people, right time.

02

Value and clarity are the foundation.

03

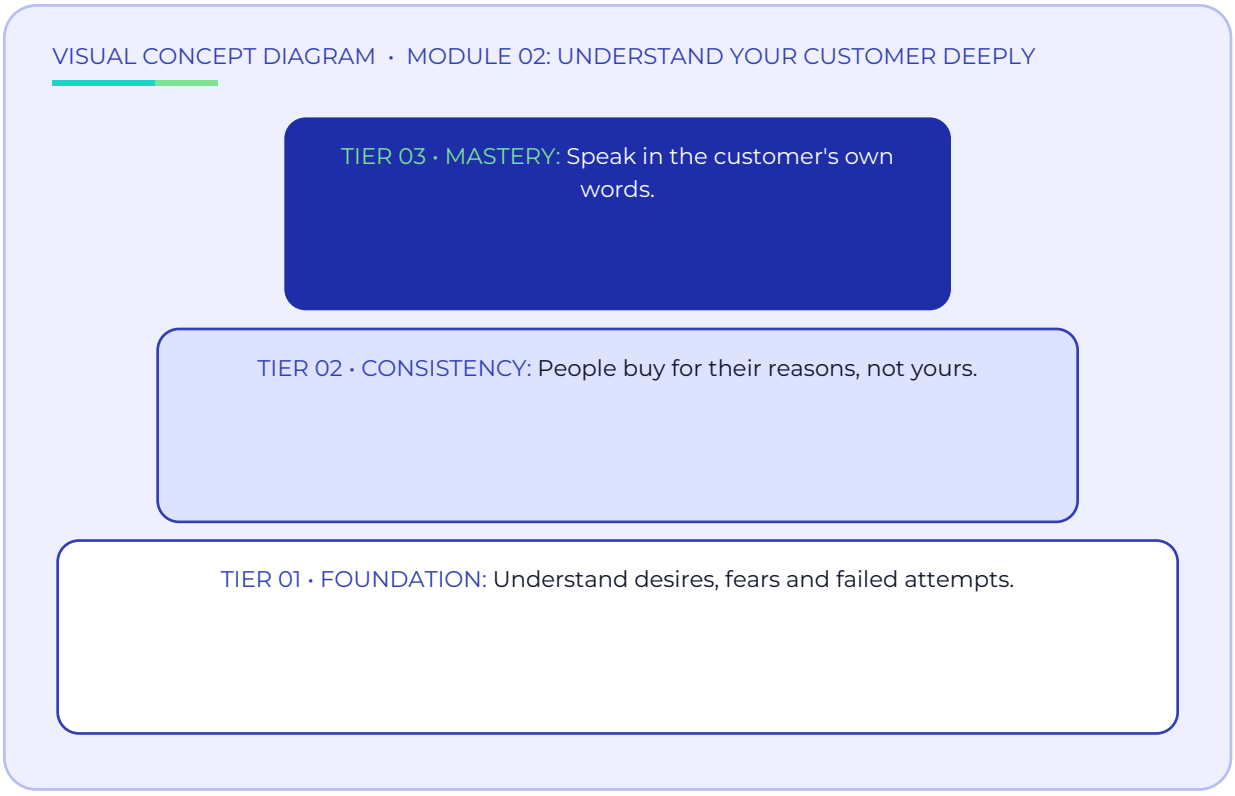

If no one knows you exist, nothing else matters.

1.2 Understand your customer deeply

You cannot sell to someone you do not understand. Before offers or adverts, get inside your customer's head: what do they want, what are they afraid of, what have they already tried that failed, and what words do they use to describe their problem? Sell the solution to a problem they feel, in the language they actually use.

People buy for their reasons, not yours. A parent buys a course not for 'features' but for their child's future. A shop owner buys your service not to 'have a website' but to look credible and win customers. Always translate what you offer into the outcome and feeling the customer is really after.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about understand your customer deeply at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that understand desires, fears and failed attempts., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 02 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Understand your customer deeply

Core Rule:
Understand desires, fears and failed attempts.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 02 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A trainer stopped advertising 'computer classes' and started saying 'get the skills employers are actually hiring for.' Same class, but now it spoke to the real fear (unemployment) and the real desire (a job). Enrolments rose.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 02

Your Practical Task: Write down your customer's top desire, their biggest fear, and three exact phrases they'd use to describe their problem. Use those phrases in your marketing.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 02 Key Takeaways

01

Understand desires, fears and failed attempts.

02

People buy for their reasons, not yours.

03

Speak in the customer's own words.

02
Core Frameworks & Strategy

Module 03: Build an irresistible offer | Module 04: Choose your marketing channels

MODULE 03 · PART 1

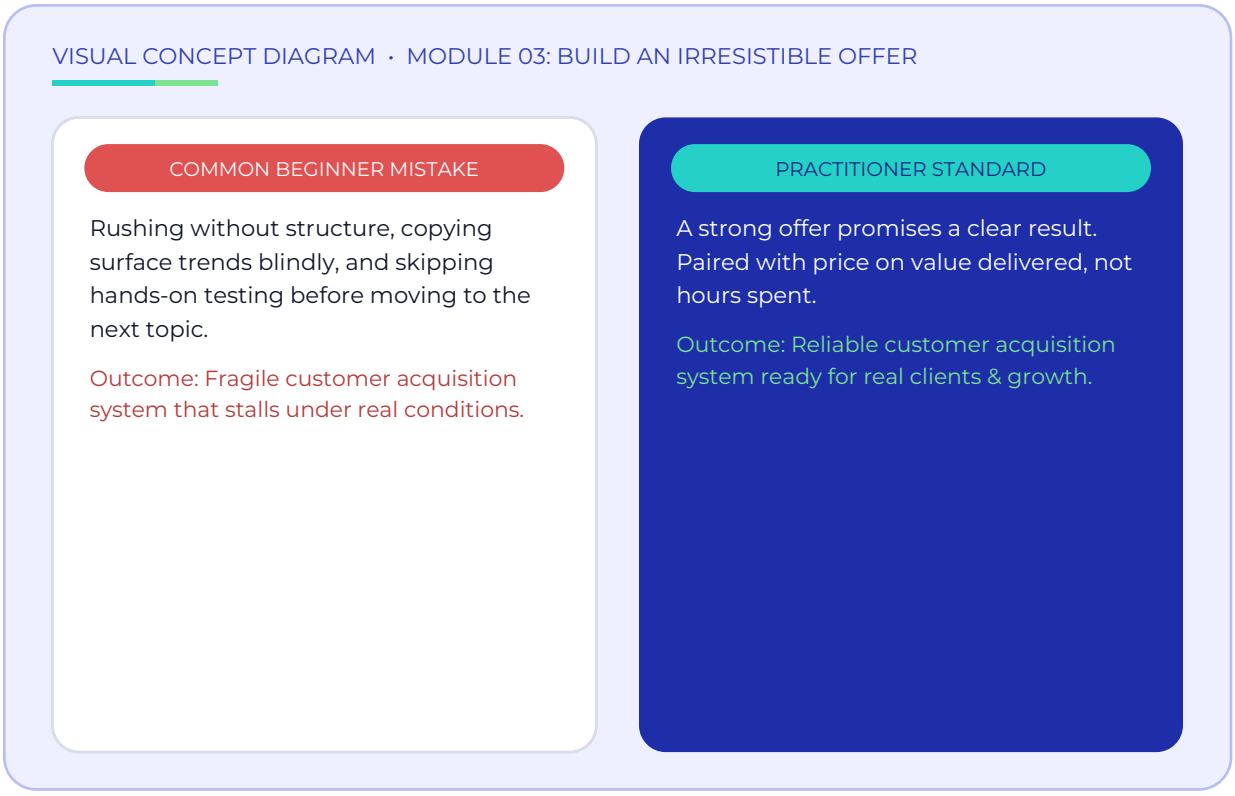

2.1 Build an irresistible offer

A great offer makes selling easy. It clearly promises a valuable result, feels worth far more than the price, and lowers the customer's risk. Do not just list what they get, make the value obvious and stack it: the main thing, plus helpful extras, plus a guarantee or reassurance that removes the fear of wasting money.

Price on value, not on your costs or your time. If your website helps a business win one extra customer a month, it is worth far more than the hours you spent. Also give people a reason to act now, limited slots, a deadline, a bonus, because an offer with no urgency gets postponed forever, which usually means never.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about build an irresistible offer at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that a strong offer promises a clear result., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 03: BUILD AN IRRESISTIBLE OFFER

MODULE 03 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Build an irresistible offer

Core Rule:
A strong offer promises a clear result.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 03 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A designer changed 'logo, 100k' to 'a complete brand starter: logo, colours, and social profile designs, done in a week, revisions until you love it, 150k, only 4 slots this month.' Higher price, more sales, because the offer felt complete and safe.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT • MODULE 03

Your Practical Task: Rewrite your offer: state the result, stack the value, reduce the risk, and add a reason to act now. Test it on a potential customer.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 03 Key Takeaways

01

A strong offer promises a clear result.

02

Price on value delivered, not hours spent.

03

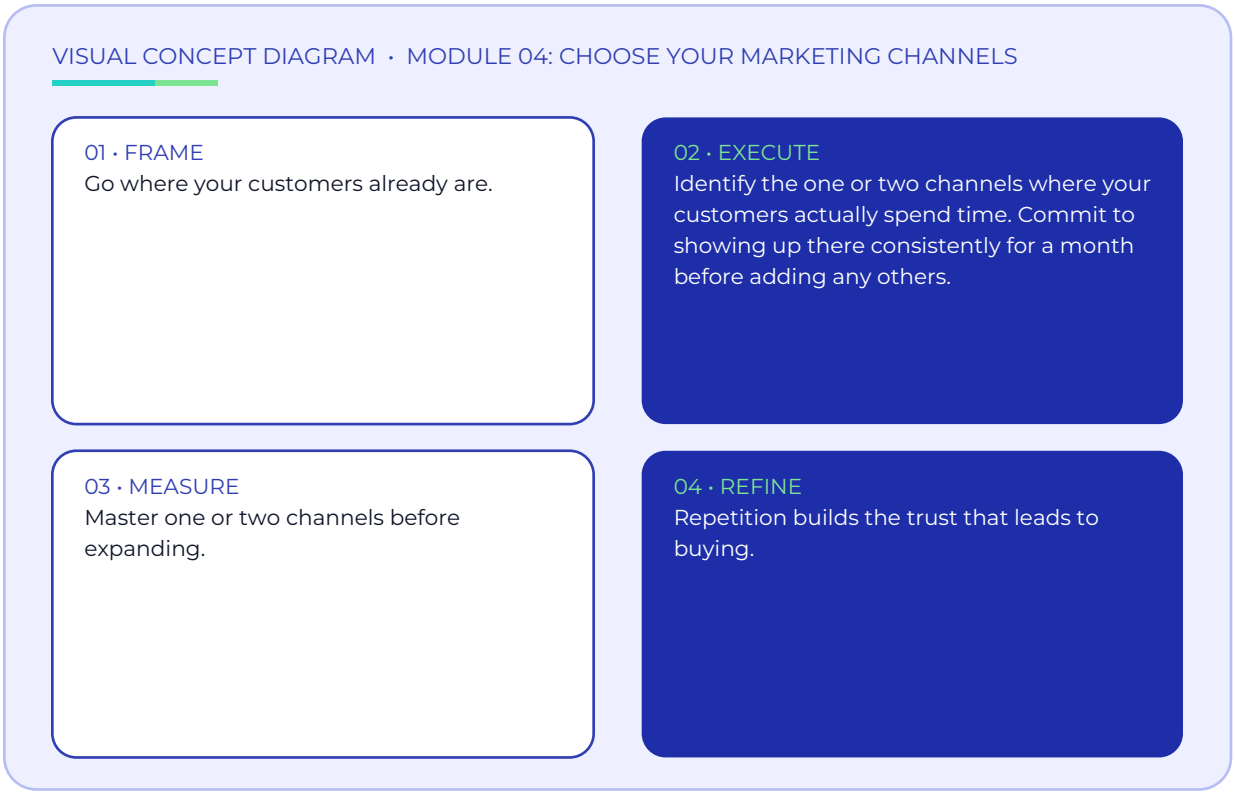

Reduce risk and add urgency to prompt action.

2.2 Choose your marketing channels

You do not need to be everywhere, you need to be where your customers already are, doing it well. For local businesses, that may be WhatsApp, referrals and community groups. For creative freelancers, Instagram, TikTok or LinkedIn. Pick one or two channels that fit your audience and master them before spreading yourself thin across five.

Marketing works through repetition and trust, not a single lucky post. Most people need to see you several times before they buy. So show up consistently on your chosen channels, keep giving value, and stay top-of-mind. Combine 'push' (reaching out directly, like WhatsApp broadcasts) with 'pull' (content that draws people to you) for the strongest results.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about choose your marketing channels at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that go where your customers already are., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 04 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Choose your marketing channels

Core Rule:
Go where your customers already are.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 04 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A caterer found her customers were all on WhatsApp, not Instagram. She focused there, a status update of each day's dishes, quick replies, a broadcast list, and her orders grew far faster than when she was scattered across every app.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 04

Your Practical Task: Identify the one or two channels where your customers actually spend time. Commit to showing up there consistently for a month before adding any others.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 04 Key Takeaways

01

Go where your customers already are.

02

Master one or two channels before expanding.

03

Repetition builds the trust that leads to buying.

03
Execution & Applied Mastery

Module 05: The psychology of selling | Module 06: Sales conversations and closing

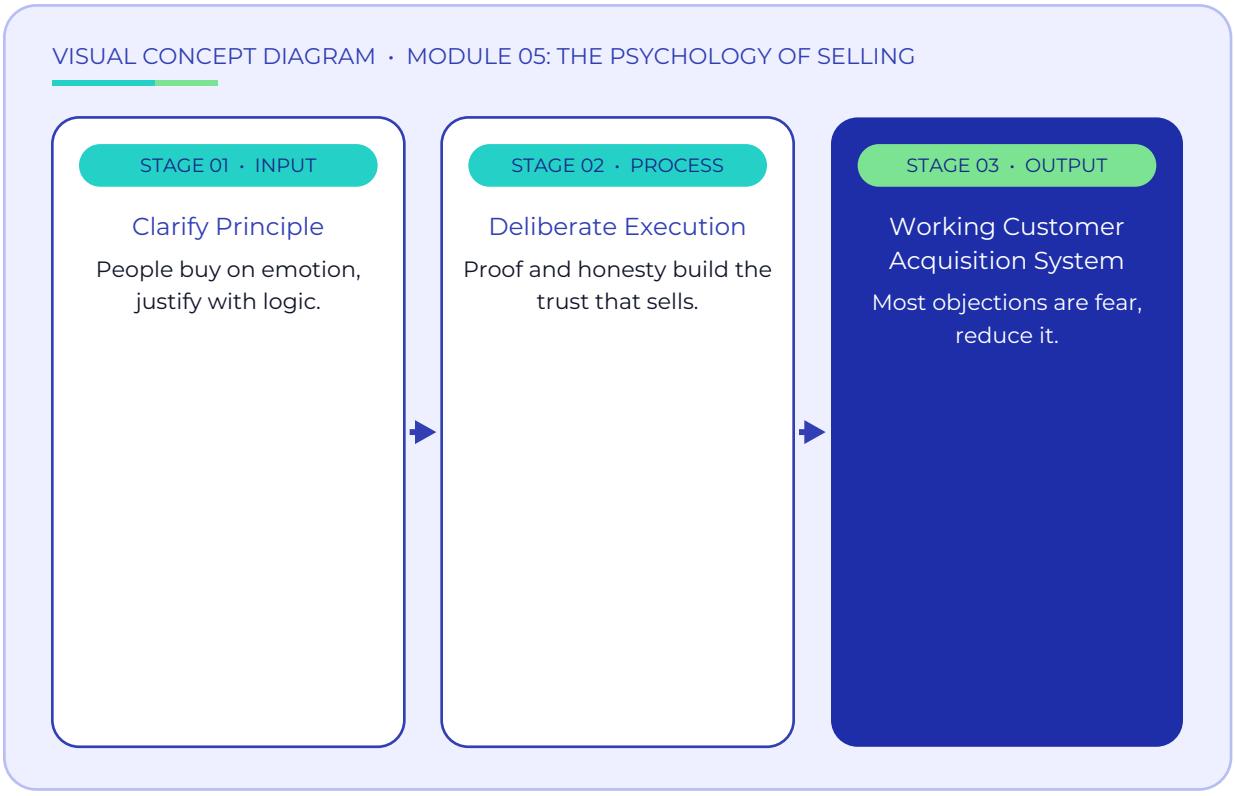

MODULE 05 · PART 1

3.1 The psychology of selling

People buy emotionally and justify logically. They must feel that you understand them and that your offer will make their life better; then they look for reasons to say yes. So sell to the feeling first, paint the better situation your customer will be in, and back it up with proof and logic afterwards. Facts alone rarely move anyone to buy.

Trust is the currency of sales. Build it with proof (results, testimonials, examples of past work), with honesty (never over-promise), and with reassurance (guarantees, clear terms). The more the customer trusts you and the less they feel at risk, the easier the yes. Reduce fear and you increase sales, almost every objection is really a fear in disguise.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about the psychology of selling at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that people buy on emotion, justify with logic., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 05 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
The psychology of selling

Core Rule:
People buy on emotion, justify with logic.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 05 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A freelancer added three short client testimonials and a 'not happy? I'll fix it free' line to his pitch. Nothing else changed, but strangers started trusting him enough to pay, because proof and reassurance removed their fear.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 05

Your Practical Task: Gather three proofs (testimonials, results or samples) and write one reassurance line for your offer. Add both to how you sell.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 05 Key Takeaways

01

People buy on emotion, justify with logic.

02

Proof and honesty build the trust that sells.

03

Most objections are fear, reduce it.

3.2 Sales conversations and closing

A sale is a helpful conversation, not a performance. Start by asking questions and listening, understand the customer's real need before pitching anything. Then present your offer as the solution to what they just told you, in their words. When you have listened well, the pitch almost makes itself, because you are simply answering what they said they need.

Then you must actually ask for the sale, the step most people skip out of fear. After presenting, go quiet and ask a closing question: 'Would you like to go ahead?' or 'Shall I reserve your slot?' Handle any hesitation by uncovering the real concern, then addressing it. Confidence, not pressure, closes: you genuinely believe your offer helps, so you invite the yes without apology.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about sales conversations and closing at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that listen first; pitch to their stated need., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

MODULE 06 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Sales conversations and closing

Core Rule:
Listen first; pitch to their stated need.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 06 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A learner used to explain her service and then just... wait, hoping. Once she started ending with 'Shall we get started?' and staying silent, her closes doubled. The offer was always good; she had simply never asked.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 06

Your Practical Task: Write your closing question and practise saying it, then staying silent. Use it in your next real sales conversation without softening or apologising.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 06 Key Takeaways

01

Listen first; pitch to their stated need.

02

You must actually ask for the sale.

03

Confidence closes; pressure repels.

04
Scaling, Capstone & Excellence

Module 07: Funnels, follow-up and keeping customers | Module 08: Your full go-to-market plan

MODULE 07 · PART 1

4.1 Funnels, follow-up and keeping customers

Most sales are lost in the follow-up, not the pitch. People get busy and forget, a polite reminder often turns a 'maybe' into a 'yes'. Have a simple system to follow up with interested people (a note, a list, a scheduled message) instead of relying on memory. The fortune, as they say, is in the follow-up.

And remember that your existing customers are your cheapest, easiest sales. It costs far less to sell again to a happy customer than to find a new one. So deliver well, stay in touch, ask for referrals, and give reasons to come back. A business that keeps its customers grows steadily; one that constantly chases only new ones stays on a treadmill.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about funnels, follow-up and keeping customers at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that follow up, most 'maybes' are lost, not refused., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 07: FUNNELS, FOLLOW-UP AND KEEPING CUSTOMERS

COMMON BEGINNER MISTAKE

Rushing without structure, copying surface trends blindly, and skipping hands-on testing before moving to the next topic.

Outcome: Fragile customer acquisition system that stalls under real conditions.

PRACTITIONER STANDARD

Follow up, most 'maybes' are lost, not refused. Paired with repeat customers are your cheapest sales.

Outcome: Reliable customer acquisition system ready for real clients & growth.

MODULE 07 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Funnels, follow-up and keeping customers

Core Rule:
Follow up, most 'maybes' are lost, not refused.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 07 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A seller kept a simple list of everyone who said 'maybe later' and messaged them a week on. A third bought. That one habit, organised follow-up, added real income he would otherwise have simply lost to forgetfulness.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 07

Your Practical Task: Start a simple follow-up list of interested people. Message everyone on it within a week. Also message one past customer with a reason to return.

Self-Check Before Moving On: Write down what worked, what felt unclear, and one specific improvement you will make on your second repetition. Competence comes from completed reps, never passive reading.

Module 07 Key Takeaways

01

Follow up, most 'maybes' are lost, not refused.

02

Repeat customers are your cheapest sales.

03

Deliver well and ask for referrals.

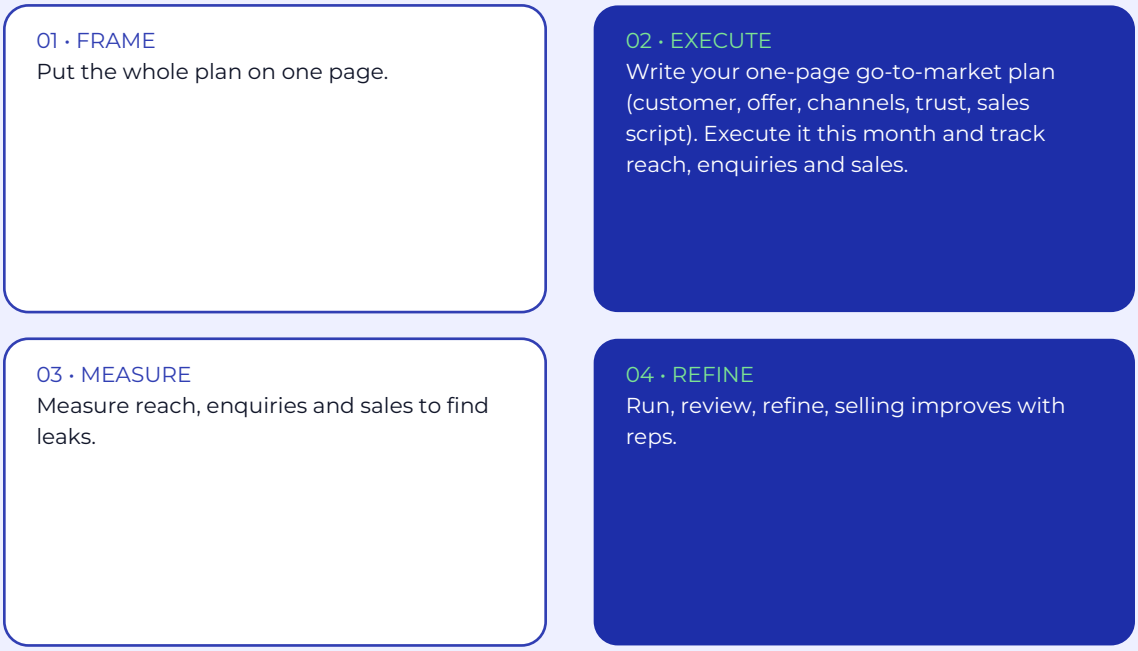

4.2 Your full go-to-market plan

Now assemble everything into one plan for something real you will sell. Define the customer and their key desire and fear; craft your irresistible offer; choose your one or two channels; decide how you will build trust; and script your sales conversation and close. Write it on a single page, a plan you can actually see is a plan you can actually run.

Then execute and measure. Track how many people you reach, how many enquire, and how many buy, so you can see where the process leaks and fix it. Selling is a skill that improves with reps and honest review, not a talent you are born with. Run your plan, learn from real results, refine, and repeat, that loop is a business.

Why This Principle Matters in Depth: Many learners read about your full go-to-market plan at a surface level, yet struggle when building a real customer acquisition system. Notice the underlying logic: when you anchor your work around the rule that put the whole plan on one page., you remove guesswork and build repeatable confidence. Take time to study the visual concept diagram below before moving to the worked case study on the next page.

VISUAL CONCEPT DIAGRAM · MODULE 08: YOUR FULL GO-TO-MARKET PLAN

MODULE 08 | FIELD BRIEF

Focus Skill:
Your full go-to-market plan

Core Rule:
Put the whole plan on one page.

Target Output:
Working customer acquisition system

MODULE 08 | WORKED CASE STUDY

Real-World Scenario:
A learner built a one-page plan to sell a design service: ideal client, offer, WhatsApp plus Instagram, testimonials for trust, and a scripted close. In her first month she landed three clients, not by luck, but by running a plan and improving it.

How to Apply This Lesson Step by Step

Look closely at why the example above succeeded: instead of waiting for perfect conditions, the practitioner focused on one concrete deliverable and tested it in the real world. Use the guided assignment below to build the exact same muscle in your own Sales & Marketing workbook.

HANDS-ON LAB ASSIGNMENT · MODULE 08

Your Practical Task: Write your one-page go-to-market plan (customer, offer, channels, trust, sales script). Execute it this month and track reach, enquiries and sales.

"Two shops sell the same phones. One just waits for customers. The other posts helpful phone tips daily, answers questions freely, and is known as 'the phone expert'. When people are ready to buy, guess who they trust. That is marketing."
