CHRISCO YOUTH AFLAME

BOOK TWO

YOUNG PASTOR

10 Compelling Truths About Your Calling

A SCRIPTURE-GROUNDED FIELD GUIDE FOR EMERGING LEADERS

A CHRISCO YOUTH AFLAME TEACHING RESOURCE

SCRIPTURE FIRST PASTORAL CARE CHRIST CENTRED

A GUIDE THROUGH THIS BOOK

TABLE OF CONTENTS

- Before You Lead
- 01 Ministry Will Cost You Personally
- 01 Put It into Practice
- 02 You Will Encourage Others While Fighting Your Own Battles
- 02 Put It into Practice
- 03 Loyalty Will Be Tested
- 03 Put It into Practice
- 04 Your Character and Motives May Be Misjudged
- 04 Put It into Practice
- 05 Your Family Needs Care and Protection
- 05 Put It into Practice
- 06 Those You Raise May Challenge You
- 06 Put It into Practice
- 07 Not Everyone Will Celebrate Your Calling
- 07 Put It into Practice
- 08 Division Is a Serious Battle
- 08 Put It into Practice
- 09 Gratitude Is Not Guaranteed
- 09 Put It into Practice
- 10 Let Christ Be Your Reward
- 10 Put It into Practice
- Endure in Context
- A Rule of Life for Young Pastors
- Questions for Mentors and Ministry Teams
- A CHRISCO Youth Aflame Commission

The LORD, he is the God. 1 Kings 18:39

WELCOME TO THIS STUDY

A WORD BEFORE YOU BEGIN

READ FIRST | Let the whole counsel of Scripture shape the lesson.

A pastoral formation guide to sacrifice, character, conflict, family, endurance, and Christ-centred ministry.

This book is designed to be read with an open Bible and a teachable heart. It aims to encourage passionate faith while refusing claims that Scripture does not make. We distinguish the biblical text from our applications, and we make room for careful questions, emotional honesty, and responsible pastoral care.

Use the discussion prompts with a trusted group. No one should be pressured to disclose private matters or to imitate another person s prayer style. Read in context, welcome correction, and let Christ not charisma, spectacle, or status be the centre.

CALLING BEGINS WITH FOLLOWING JESUS

BEFORE YOU LEAD

FOUNDATION | Follow Christ before you seek a platform.

A pastoral title is not a private possession or proof of spiritual superiority. In the New Testament, leadership is service under Christ, tested by character, doctrine, care, and accountability. Aspiring pastors should grow in Scripture, prayer, humility, and the ordinary responsibilities of community life.

The ten truths that follow are realities to discern, not a script predicting that every pastor will experience every hardship in exactly the same way. Ministry is costly, but abuse is not a calling. Endurance matters, but staying in danger is not the measure of faith. A leader should never be isolated from wise counsel or made unaccountable by claims of special revelation.

The KJV text of Matthew 24:13 is included in its context near the end. Jesus words call disciples to faithfulness amid deception and persecution; they are not a guarantee that every ministry assignment succeeds or that a pastor must remain in an unsafe role.

TRUTH 01 | SACRIFICE WITHOUT EXPLOITATION

01 MINISTRY WILL COST YOU PERSONALLY

READ | Mark 6:30 32; 1 Timothy 5:17 18.

Jesus says discipleship involves taking up the cross (Mark 8:34 35), and Paul describes costly service (2 Corinthians 11:23 28). Calling may require inconvenient hours, travel, study, hospitality, or financial generosity. But sacrifice is not permission for an institution to demand unpaid labour without limit, to seize a minister s family resources, or to call every boundary selfishness.

Christian sacrifice is freely offered to God and neighbour; manipulation extracts it for a leader s comfort. Pastors need rest, fair compensation where possible, honest budgets, shared responsibility, and time with family. Jesus withdrew to pray and rest with his disciples (Mark 6:31). A sustainable ministry honours both service and creaturely limits.

Ask: What is genuinely mine to offer in this season? What belongs to my household or other responsibilities? Who can help me discern whether this request is faithful service or unhealthy pressure? A calling does not erase the need for wise stewardship.

01 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

02 YOU WILL ENCOURAGE OTHERS WHILE FIGHTING YOUR OWN BATTLES

PRACTICE | Name one trusted person you can contact before crisis.

Paul comforted others with the comfort he himself had received (2 Corinthians 1:3 7). That does not mean ministers must pretend to be well or preach certainty while secretly collapsing. Biblical ministry includes weakness, lament, and asking others for prayer (Romans 15:30; 2 Corinthians 12:7 10). A pastor s credibility does not depend on a flawless private life.

Build a trustworthy circle beyond the people you lead: peers, supervisors, a spiritual director, a counsellor, and appropriate medical care. Confidentiality has limits when someone is in danger; know your safeguarding and referral procedures. Do not make congregants responsible for carrying the pastor s unprocessed pain or use the pulpit to disclose another person s story.

You may serve while grieving, but you are not required to serve without support. Rest, treatment, and temporary leave can be faithful stewardship. Encouraging others includes modelling truthful help-seeking.

02 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

03 LOYALTY WILL BE TESTED

READ | Matthew 18:15–20; Galatians 2:11–14.

Jesus experienced abandonment, and Paul knew the pain of companions leaving (2 Timothy 4:9–16). Betrayal is real. Yet the claim that people who question or leave are automatically disloyal can become a tool of control. Christian loyalty is first loyalty to Christ and truth; leaders are accountable, and followers may raise concerns or make a safe departure.

Build trust through clear expectations, shared decisions, financial transparency, and fair processes for disagreement. When conflict occurs, distinguish a personal slight from a safeguarding concern, theological difference, or legitimate report of misconduct. Do not retaliate, threaten curses, or recruit the congregation to punish a critic.

Grieve losses without becoming suspicious of everyone. Jesus entrusted himself to the Father while still forming a community of disciples. Wise boundaries do not cancel love; they make honest relationships safer.

03 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

04 YOUR CHARACTER AND MOTIVES MAY BE MISJUDGED

LEADER CHECK | Is there an independent, safe way for people to raise concerns?

Jesus was misunderstood and falsely accused (Mark 3:20 22; Luke 7:33 34). Scripture also warns leaders to maintain a good reputation and be above reproach (1 Timothy 3:1 7; Titus 1:5 9). These truths belong together: criticism can be unfair, but a leader must not use misunderstood to evade a serious, evidence-based concern.

Respond to allegations through fair, documented, accountable processes. Listen before defending. Correct errors, apologize where needed, and protect those who report harm. Where accusations are false, seek appropriate counsel and answer with verifiable facts rather than threats or public shaming. Do not attempt to investigate abuse alone or promise absolute secrecy where safety is at stake.

Motives matter, but others cannot always see them. Let patterns of humility, integrity, transparent finances, and consistent care support your words. Character is formed in hidden decisions long before it is tested in public.

04 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

05 YOUR FAMILY NEEDS CARE AND PROTECTION

PRACTICE | Schedule protected, ordinary time with the people closest to you.

Ministry affects spouses, children, parents, and close friends. They may be asked to host, travel, wait, or accept public attention. But family members are not ministry props. A spouse s consent matters; children deserve privacy and protection; no one should be forced to perform spirituality or provide unpaid labour to prove support for a calling.

1 Timothy 3:4 5 speaks of household care in leadership qualifications, while Ephesians 6:4 warns parents not to provoke their children. These passages do not demand a perfect family; they underline responsibility. Set boundaries around photographs, personal stories, criticism, online exposure, and ministry hours. Make a plan for complaints directed at family members and take threats seriously.

When a family member is harmed, respond as a caregiver, not as a public-relations manager. Seek appropriate pastoral, professional, or legal support. A healthy church shares the work so one household is not required to carry the whole vision.

05 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

TRUTH 06 | DEVELOP PEOPLE WHO CAN THINK AND LEAD

06 THOSE YOU RAISE MAY CHALLENGE YOU

READ | Numbers 11:24 30; 2 Timothy 2:1 2.

Paul mentored Timothy and Titus, and Jesus prepared disciples who would carry the work beyond his earthly ministry. Healthy succession means others grow in wisdom, responsibility, and courage. A student who raises a concern, develops a distinct gift, or takes another assignment is not automatically an enemy.

Competition and undermining can occur, but leaders should test facts rather than label dissent as rebellion. Clarify roles, share credit, create transparent decision-making, and address conflict directly. If there is misconduct, use fair procedures. If someone is ready to lead elsewhere, bless their growth rather than using access, money, or spiritual threats to keep them dependent.

Equip people to serve Christ, not to become extensions of your personality. The church belongs to Christ. A leader s fruit includes the ability to prepare others and release responsibility with humility.

06 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

07 NOT EVERYONE WILL CELEBRATE YOUR CALLING

DISCERN | Who can correct you without fear of losing relationship or livelihood?

Jesus hometown questioned him (Mark 6:1 6), and prophets were not always welcomed. Opposition does not by itself prove that a person is right; popularity does not prove that they are wrong. A calling should be tested through Scripture, character, community discernment, gifts, wise counsel, and observable fruit not solely by a private impression or by resistance from critics.

Some people may misunderstand your assignment; others may see a real blind spot. Listen for truth even when it arrives imperfectly. Keep trusted advisers who are free to disagree. Avoid announcing that all criticism is persecution or that your vision cannot be questioned because God gave it to you.

Faithfulness is not the same as universal approval. You can continue a sound assignment without retaliating, exaggerating your authority, or silencing others. Humility keeps the calling under Christ s lordship.

07 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

08 DIVISION IS A SERIOUS BATTLE

READ | Romans 12:18; James 3:13 18.

Paul urges believers to maintain unity and put away destructive speech (Ephesians 4:1 6, 25 32). Division can be fuelled by gossip, factions, envy, and careless leadership. But unity is not a demand to hide abuse, silence victims, or avoid necessary disagreement. Biblical peace is joined to truth, justice, repentance, and care.

Address conflict early. Speak directly where safe; use impartial mediation for disputes; record important decisions; avoid triangulation and public speculation. When there is a safeguarding allegation, follow policy and report to appropriate authorities rather than treating it as a private disagreement to be smoothed over.

A leader serves unity by modelling repentance, fairness, and patient listening. Do not call every boundary division. Sometimes people need distance to be safe. Reconciliation may be a hope, but it cannot be forced or substituted for accountability.

08 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

09 GRATITUDE IS NOT GUARANTEED

REFLECT | Can you receive appreciation without needing it, and ask for help without shame?

Jesus healed ten lepers and only one returned to give thanks (Luke 17:11 19). Ministry can include unseen work and disappointing responses. Service offered only for applause becomes fragile. Jesus teaches giving without making public recognition the motive (Matthew 6:1 4). The reward is not a guarantee of comfort or acclaim; it is faithful life before God.

At the same time, churches should not romanticise neglect. Workers deserve fair support, honest appreciation, rest, and practical care (1 Timothy 5:17 18; Galatians 6:6). Serve God, not applause must never be used to excuse financial opacity, chronic overwork, or contempt for staff and volunteers.

Practise gratitude both ways: name others contributions, share credit, and let people express thanks without making it a debt. Create sustainable systems so ministry does not depend on one person s hidden exhaustion.

09 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

10 LET CHRIST BE YOUR REWARD

KEY TEXTS | Philippians 3:7 14; Matthew 24:4 14; 1 Peter 5:4.

Paul counts all things loss compared with knowing Christ (Philippians 3:7 14). This is not a promise that betrayal or hardship cannot wound a minister. It is a confession that Christ is of greater worth than status. Ministry shaped by the cross depends on grace, community, and hope not on public recognition.

Matthew 24:13 says, he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. In context, Jesus warns disciples about deception, persecution, lawlessness, and the need to remain faithful (Matthew 24:4 14). It is not a guarantee of ministry success, immunity from suffering, or a command to remain in an abusive role. Endurance means persevering in allegiance to Christ; seeking safety and help may be part of that faithfulness.

Keep your identity larger than your title. Sabbath, friendship, worship, repentance, and ordinary service protect the heart from turning a ministry assignment into a personal throne. The crown is Christ himself, and the final outcome belongs to God.

10 PUT IT INTO PRACTICE

ONE NEXT STEP | Choose a faithful action not a dramatic performance.

Bring this truth into your actual ministry context. Read the cited passages in full, name what is within your responsibility, and distinguish it from what you cannot control. Ask a mature, accountable person to help you assess your next step. The goal is not to brace for inevitable enemies; it is to become a servant who is both courageous and teachable.

Reflect: What part of this teaching challenges an assumption I have carried? Is there a boundary, apology, conversation, referral, or practical change I need to make? Who could be harmed if I apply this lesson carelessly? What would love of God and neighbour require here?

Prayer: Lord Jesus, make me faithful without making me hard; humble without making me silent in the face of harm; courageous without making me controlling. Teach me to receive correction, serve with wisdom, protect those entrusted to my care, and find my worth in you. Amen.

MATTHEW 24:13 AND FAITHFUL PERSEVERANCE

ENDURE IN CONTEXT

READ IN CONTEXT | Matthew 24:4–14; Hebrews 12:1–3.

But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. — Matthew 24:13 (KJV). Read Matthew 24:4–14 around this verse. Jesus warns of false messiahs, deception, persecution, betrayal, lawlessness, and the cooling of love. In that setting, endurance means continuing in faithful allegiance to Christ through trial and refusing deception and lawlessness.

This verse is not a promise that a minister will avoid burnout, that a church project will prosper, or that a person must remain in a harmful institution. Christian endurance is not denial. The wider Bible calls believers to seek help, flee danger when appropriate, report wrongdoing, and care for one another. Perseverance may include rest, treatment, a change of role, or a safe exit from abuse.

Pastors need the ordinary means of grace: Scripture, prayer, fellowship, wise accountability, rest, and care. The final hope belongs to God. We serve faithfully without pretending we control the outcome.

KEEP THE CALLING HUMAN AND CHRIST-CENTRED

A RULE OF LIFE FOR YOUNG PASTORS

ROOTED | Colossians 2:6 7; Mark 6:31.

WORD: make time for Scripture beyond sermon preparation. PRAYER: speak honestly to God, including lament and silence. REST: keep a weekly rhythm of rest as far as circumstances allow. COMMUNITY: maintain friendships with people who are not your audience. ACCOUNTABILITY: invite trusted leaders to ask about character, money, power, and wellbeing.

FAMILY & FRIENDS: protect commitments and respect the choices of those close to you. LEARNING: continue theological and practical formation; know when to refer beyond your expertise. SAFETY: follow safeguarding policy, obtain consent, keep appropriate records, and report concerns through the right channels. FINANCES: handle church and personal funds transparently, with shared oversight.

This list is not a scorecard of holiness. Adapt it to your season and responsibilities. When you fall short, do not hide; seek help, repair what you can, and begin again in grace.

BUILD LEADERS, NOT DEPENDENCY

QUESTIONS FOR MENTORS AND MINISTRY TEAMS

MENTORING AIM | Equip people to serve faithfully beyond your shadow.

What does this young leader believe calling means? Can they name limits without fear? Who supervises them, and is that relationship genuinely accountable? Are finances, workload, and decision-making transparent? Do family members have privacy and meaningful choice? How are complaints and safeguarding reports handled?

Do not treat every disagreement as rebellion or every hardship as proof of anointing. Invite honest feedback. Make succession and delegation possible. Pay attention to mental and physical wellbeing. Encourage professional support where appropriate. A mentor s role is not to control a younger leader s future but to help them grow in wisdom and service.

A healthy ministry culture can name harm, correct mistakes, honour work, and remain centred on Christ. It gives emerging leaders both responsibility and support, both encouragement and truthful limits.

FOCUS REFORM SPIRIT-FORMED WITNESS

A CHRISCO YOUTH AFLAME COMMISSION

COMMISSION | Acts 2:16 21; 1 Corinthians 14:29.

The ministry language supplied for this book includes: There are Prophets and there s ENB ; Adom w wiem ; Focus ; 21st Century Reformer ; and Type of Joel 2:28. These expressions are included as a ministry signature and aspiration. ENB is retained as provided, without assigning it an explanation not supplied by the ministry.

Joel 2:28 32 is part of Peter s explanation of Pentecost in Acts 2:16 21. The promise speaks of the Spirit poured out on all kinds of people sons and daughters, young and old, servants and calls hearers to the Lord. It is not a licence for an individual to claim authority beyond Scripture or to avoid testing. Prophetic speech is to be weighed (1 Corinthians 14:29; 1 Thessalonians 5:19 22).

Let Focus mean attention to Christ and Scripture; let 21st Century Reformer mean courageous service that builds up rather than dominates; and let Type of Joel 2:28 point to hope for a Spirit-filled people, not a superior rank. May the work be known by truth, humility, justice, compassion, and accountable love.

CLOSING BLESSING

BLESSING | 1 Peter 5:1 4.

May Christ be your pattern and your reward. May Scripture correct and comfort you. May you find companions who tell the truth in love. May your home be treated with honour, your body with care, and your gifts with gratitude. May you serve without needing applause and receive help without shame.

When you are misunderstood, keep your heart soft and your boundaries wise. When you must repent, do so clearly. When others suffer, do not offer easy explanations where compassion is needed. When the work is heavy, share it. When danger is real, seek safety. When the way is uncertain, ask for wisdom.

The chief Shepherd will appear, and the faithful are promised an unfading crown (1 Peter 5:1 4). Until then, shepherd willingly, not for dishonest gain or domination, but as an example to the flock. The church belongs to Jesus. Amen.

ABOUT THIS EDITION

IMAGE CREDITS & SCRIPTURE NOTE

CHRISCO YOUTH AFLAME | Scripture Formation Service

Cover and section photograph: Pefa East Gate Church - Nakuru (2021), by Pefa East Gate Church - Nakuru, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. Source: https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Pefa.jpg. License: https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/4.0/. The photograph is cropped for layout; no watermark was added.

Decorative vector motifs are original artwork. Scripture quotations marked KJV are from the King James Version. The lesson 10 truths is a pastoral teaching outline, not a prophecy that every listed experience must occur. Seek qualified professional support for medical, mental-health, legal, or safeguarding needs.

CHRISCO YOUTH AFLAME

Go deeper.
Stay in Scripture.

A pastoral formation guide to sacrifice, character, conflict, family, endurance, and Christ-centred ministry.

SCRIPTURE FORMATION SERVICE

A resource for personal study, youth ministry, and pastoral formation.

IMAGE ATTRIBUTION & SCRIPTURE NOTES

Cover photograph: Pefa East Gate Church - Nakuru (2021), Pefa East Gate Church - Nakuru, Wikimedia Commons. File: https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/File:Pefa.jpg License: CC BY-SA 4.0. https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/4.0/ Photo cropped; no watermark added.